THE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

All music lovers in Columbia should find cause for rejoicing in the news that the St. Louis Choral Symphony orchestra will be brought here for three concerts. These concerts will be given about a month apart so that the treat will not come all at once. It has also been planned to prepare the students for these programs by lectures in the University auditorium. Everyone, whether citizen or student, who is interested in good music should attend these lectures. The St. Louis Symphony orchestra has made a name for itself in musical circles in St. Louis and has done much to increase the standards of music in that city.

The company will be brought here through the efforts of the Phi Mu Alpha, an organization that has done much to promote musical and artistic ideals at the university. The Phi Mu Alpha members have obtained a guarantee of $1,500 but more money will be needed.

If the venture is not to fail it must have the support of all friends of good music.

It will be really amusing when Kansas starts her "Beat Missouri" club next fall.

By delaying the new sidewalks to be constructed on South Ninth Street, the citizens will save sweeping the snow from them this winter.

THE SCHOOL OF EDUCATION.

The first instruction in work distinctly for teachers in the University of Missouri was offered in 1867, when a separate department, known as the Normal department was established. This department was reorganized as the Teachers College, and last year its name was changed to the School of Education.

This department takes high rank both locally and nationally. The School of Education high school is the best organized high school for the training of teachers in the United States Teachers' College, and last year its School of Education the department has a higher standard for the degree of Bachelor of Science in Education than any other institution in the States. Since becoming the School of Education the department has a higher standard for the degree second only to the Teachers' College of Columbia University. Representatives from neighboring institutions which are contemplating changes in plans in connection with their pedagogical courses visit the School of Education frequently.

Men and women find that it pays, and pays well, for those who intend to choose teaching as a vocation to specially prepare for the work. The old-time teacher with only his own ideas to guide him in the art of teaching is passing away. The new man with theories, practical information and well planned schemes is taking his place.

In this great march of progress in the educational world, the School of Education of the University of Missouri is making its influence felt. More than ever before the people of the state of Missouri are recognizing the fact that the teachers sent out from the University of Missouri know how to conduct the affairs of the schoolroom.

In training men and women for the profession of teaching, the School of Education is rendering the state a service which takes precedence over all others. For in providing better teachers for the training of the young of our state, it insures a higher rank in civilization, better citizens and more intelligent men in all the professions and trades of the business and professional world.

"A House of a Thousand Candles" is to be presented in Columbia soon. Really they will all be needed if the electric lights are no better than usual.

As yet there has been no rush of patent medicine manufacturers to claim that $100,000 offered by a Yale alumnus for a cure for consumption. Strange, isn't it? But possibly the "sucker" harvest gives greater returns.

The controversy may be considered as settled now—Walter Wellman has been heard from.

The proposed "Boosters' Club" at the University of Missouri will be able to give the New Missouri Spirit a practical application.

It now costs 15 cents to get shaved in Columbia barber shops. Another advertisement for safety razors.

In choosing Dean H. B. Shaw of the School of Engineering to inspect and make a report on the condition of the city water and electric light plant, the councilmen may feel confident they have selected an expert. Furthermore, they have chosen one who has the best interests of Columbia at heart.

So many members of the faculty of the University of Missouri are receiving honors that we wonder where the other universities come in.

Surveyors are working on the proposed St. Louis-Kansas City trolley line. But there is a difference between surveying a railroad and building one.

The students who won the prizes of $25 in soda fountain checks should try to cash in $2 worth each and join the Students' Protective Association.

The generosity of R. A. Long of Kansas City, which prompted him to offer the Bible College of Missouri $50,000 provided the college raised a similar amount, should also prompt him to extend the time so the college can secure his gift.

The Unfortunate One.

Jean Paul Laurens, the famous French painter, was the son of an honest cart-driver of Toulouse. At one time when the painter was at the height of his Parisian reputation it happened that two old women at Toulouse were talking about the Laurens family.

"Let me see," said one, "there were two boys, weren't there?"

"Yes."

"What became of them?"

"Oh, one's a grocer right here in Toulouse. He does a very good business."

"And the other one?"

"The younger one? He went off to Paris and became an artist?"

"Dear, dear! And his father such a good, worthy man!"

Eighteen per cent. of the entire area of France, or about 23,500,000 acres, is forest land.

"New Spirit" in Debating.

To the Editor of the University Missourian: We have heard much this season about the New Spirit and I wonder if we really have it. When the "Beat Kansas" buttons were on sale every man in every debating society wore one. The three men who sold more buttons than any other three were Wolfers, Clausen and Priestly, all inter-state debaters. When the Roper fund was being raised Wolfers was among the most active, and all season Clausen refereed every day, without receiving a cent of salary. Missouri's debaters have the New Spirit. Have the other students? Last year we won all our inter-state debates; the year before it was the same. This year, with the best of prospects for another championship representation, the lack of support of debates makes it necessary to cancel our contracts with Texas and Colorado, and thus lose our opportunity to maintain our prestige.

Debating is a proper university activity. It is not so spectacular as football, but the men engaged in it are serving their institution just as truly as are the pigskin warriors. The writer is unqualifiedly in favor of football, and of support of football teams, and the instances cited above prove that debaters are in favor of the same, but do not the men engaged in debate deserve at least support to insure the continuance of inter-state debating at the university? Do we not owe it to the university to make it possible for her to win the honors of the forum, along with those of the track, the diamond, and the gridiron? Is it not a part of the new spirit to support all forms of university activities? If it is, the students of the university have in the past failed to do their duty. It remains to be seen whether or not the students are going to continue to fail, until a great activity—and one in which the university has won more consistently than in any other—is entirely destroyed. Let's get together and exercise a little of that New Spirit.

A DEBATER.

No Assistance Needed.

Lucinda stood in the presence of two famous surgeons who had just assured her that her present condition demanded an operation and that unless it was performed within a short time she would in all probability die. Lucinda listened respectfully.

"I'm jes as much obliged to you gentlemen as I can be," she assured them, "but of de deah Lord has done made up his min' to call me home, I thinks he kin translate me widout no assistance."—Life.
